Heroin is killing people in Northern Kentucky! In fact it killed one of our family members. Nicholas' accidental overdose broke our hearts but instead of letting it tear our family down we are going to fight. NKYHatesHeroin.Com is our way of fighting against heroin and hopefully saving you or your loved ones.

During a visit to a Northern Kentucky hospital, Nicholas' mother Holly tried to discuss his heroin addiction with anyone willing to listen. She was desperate, as desperate as you may be right now. She had already reached out to Nicholas' doctor, friends, family, clergy, searched online, any resource she could find, to no avail. Even the nurses at the hospital were lost on what to tell her.

After Nicholas' accidental overdose our family vowed to help as many people struggling with the overwhelming, confusing, and frustrating search for help. This booklet is our attempt at helping you to locate the care and services you or your loved one need for recovery.

Heroin... The Facts

54% of the drug overdose deaths in Northern Kentucky in 2013 were due to heroin. Heroin is a deadly drug that can result in physical dependence within a short period of time. Due to the dangers of the drug, it is important to seek treatment when dependence starts to develop.

The creation of heroin comes from opium poppies. The flowers are used to create several opiate prescription medications. The flowers are grown in several countries, but heroin is primarily produced in Afghanistan and Mexico. Unfortunately, the compounds that reduce pain are also addictive. All opiate drugs require the supervision of a medical doctor.

Heroin is commonly taken as a recreational substance due to the impact on the body. The chemicals cause feelings of pleasure. Abusing the substance depends on the individual, but using a needle to inject a liquid form of the drug is common. Other individuals might smoke the drug or take it as a pill. Using a powdered form to snort the substance or creating a suppository might occur in some cases. The amount of time before the drug reaches the blood stream depends on the method of taking the substance. Heroin is extremely inexpensive – $5 can get you high, $10 can kill you. It is also easy to find in ANY neighborhood. It's often sold in busy shopping centers and gas station parking lots and common teen hangouts. Most dealers will give it to you for free your first time so they can get you hooked.

Regardless of the method used, the risk of an overdose is similar. The number of deaths from heroin has increased from around 2,550 to more than 3,000 individuals from 2006 to 2008. The trend shows an increasing problem.

Side Effects of Heroin

The possible impacts on the body include:

- Throwing up or upset stomach
- Problems with breathing
- Inability to feel or process pain
- Sickness from infectious diseases
- Veins that become damaged
- Taking too much
- Damage to the kidneys and other organs
- Dying or near-death experiences

While the side effects are severe, it is not the only danger associated with the drug. Since heroin is commonly injected into the body with needles, the risk of contracting diseases from sharing needles is high. Some individuals will develop HIV, AIDS or Hepatitis C as a result of injecting the drug.

Heroin Withdrawal Symptoms

Depending on the dosage and level of addiction, withdrawal symptoms can start within 6 to 24 hours of the last dose. Common withdrawal symptoms include:

- Symptoms that are similar to a cold or flu
- High body temperatures
- Pain in the muscles, bones and joints
- Upset stomach
- Feeling hot and cold

Detoxifying the body is a challenge that requires medical supervision. With professional help, it is possible to get through the first difficult step of recovery.

Heroin addiction is a serious problem that impacts many individuals. When an addiction develops, it is important to seek help. If the addiction is not controlled and overcome, then it will lead to financial strife and health complications.

Twelve Ideas for Helping a Loved One with Addiction

by Linda L. Verst, BA CPS

I've heard it said that "what is urgent is rarely important, and what is important is rarely urgent". That may be true about most things, but it surely did not feel true to me when my husband was in the midst of a destructive addiction to alcohol and other drugs, or later, when our son developed a terrifying love affair with cocaine. Everything felt urgent. Everything seemed life or death. I lost all perspective on decision making. Everything felt equally important, frightening beyond my coping skills.

We are, according to the media, in the midst of a heroin epidemic. Many parents, siblings, wives and other loved ones have the urgency I describe.

You may be one of these folks, terrified your beloved wife/husband, son(s) or daughter(s) will die if you make the wrong move. Please understand: You can do all the right things, and he/she may still lose his life. But you can move the odds in favor of her survival by what you choose to do or not do. I've studied addiction and preventing addiction close to 50 years, but probably more important to you, I've lived through it. I want to share some strategies/ideas in the hope they will be of service. This is not an all inclusive list and I am not an expert; my ideas are not necessarily listed in order of importance. They come with my fervent prayer for your own recovery, as well as that of your loved one.

1 Take steps immediately toward your own recovery. You've probably been missing sleep, meals and recreation. Find a way to take better care of yourself. When there is addiction in a family it throws every thing and everyone out of balance. Cancer affects family members; so does addiction; this is what the experts mean when they call it a family disease. There are no "normal" coping skills for an abnormal disease. Restore your own balance. As an AI-Anon Public Relation ad once said: You can see what it's doing to him/her. Can you see what it's doing to you?

2 To that end, find a good 12 Step group. Nar-Anon is for family members and friends of addicts. AI-Anon is for family members and friends of alcoholics. If it's an addiction other than alcohol, and you can't find a Nar-Anon group close by, go to AI-Anon. It's been around longer, and as a result there are more established groups to choose from. The only requirement for AI-Anon membership is that you have a friend or relative with an alcohol problem. Who doesn't?! Just remember everything said about coping with alcoholism applies to other addictions as well. Listen and learn. Remember: Nar-Anon and AI-Anon are self-help groups and not made up of perfect people. Go to at least 6 meetings before you decide it's not for you. Find the one where you feel safest and get a phone list of members. Find them on line or in the phone book.

3 Before and after meetings, talk to 12 step friends; they will have ideas of places to go for further help. These people can help restore your sense of normalcy and good humor. Get a therapist or counselor for yourself as needed. I used a combination of 12 steps and a therapist. Be a good role model!

4 Do not take on any responsibility that is not yours. Is your loved one an adult? Repeat this to yourself as many times as it takes: He's in jail? Not your responsibility. He owes someone money? Not your responsibility. She's hungry? Tired? Unemployed? Not your responsibility. Repeat the following, too: The longer I do for someone anything that they should be doing themselves, the longer I am aiding and abetting the disease of addiction. Got that? You are helping him stay sick and get sicker, and avoid recovery and sobriety. When you stop this stuff, you are not being cruel, you are loving her. Repeat that, too. You know why? Because your addict will not be happy. Call your 12 Step friends; they will support you.

5 Be honest with yourself and the person you love, whose addiction is causing you strife. Sometimes, as when he is presenting convincing schemes, all of which lead down the road to your pocketbook, the best thing you can say is: "I love you but I cannot help you. I do not have money for you." Repeat once or twice if you must. Then leave the room, hang up the phone, don't return the text. Trust me, she heard you the first time.

6 Addiction causes a loss of conscience for many. If your loved one with an addiction has keys to your home or even if he doesn't, lock up anything you do not want stolen. Especially, lock up guns, knives, electronic devices that can be easily removed, family heirlooms and medications. Your loved one may not steal your belongings, but if she's using, she has friends who will. If something is stolen from your home, report it to the police immediately. If you suspect where items are, or who took them, tell the truth. This is no time for protecting someone from facing consequences. Jail can be a safe place for an addict. If it was cancer, you would take him to a hospital. Think of it that way.

7 Be assured of the following: You did not cause this illness; you cannot cure this illness; you cannot control this illness. You can cope with it. Put your energy there.

8 Again, addiction, whether in your child, spouse or other loved one is not your fault. We make amends when necessary, but each person is responsible for his own behavior. I believe that no parent ever held an infant in her arms and whispered into the baby's ear "I can't wait to see how much I can screw up your life." An Al-Anon writer's remarks in response to a grown child, ranting about her upbringing went something like this: “Yes, dear, some of your problems have my name on them, but ALL the solutions have your name on them.

9 Sometimes I think the American way is to throw money at problems. Please understand that this problem in your life is going to require time and energy, love, compassion, patience. Your loved one may not be ready for help or guidance, but you can get it. It will help you. It’s worth every penny and every hour; Al-Anon and Nar-Anon are free!

10 Find out where good inpatient and outpatient treatment facilities, therapists and the like are in your community and state/surrounding states. Check out more than one or two before you settle in for where you might go for help and support. You or your loved one may never use them, but it is good to be informed. Check on cost, who pays; what the loved one’s insurance may cover. Trust your gut – you will know who you can work with. Some healers are not quite as well as they need to be to help you.

11 Want to take action? An intervention is best done with professional help. For greater Cincinnati Ohio folks, the Alcoholism Council of Greater Cincinnati is a great place to start, no matter where you are in the process. Call 513 281 7880 or go to alcoholismcouncil.org .

Casey’s Law now exists in many states. “The act provides a means of intervening with someone who is unable to recognize his or her need for treatment due to impairment. This law will allow parents, relatives and/or friends to petition the court for treatment on behalf of the substance abuse-impaired person.” This quote is from operationunite.org/treatment/caseys-law. Go there for more information.

12 Take time to slowly, mindfully study the above 11 suggestions. Begin to practice one or two. Breathe. Try not to let your urgency pull you immediately to # 10 & 11. They’re placed there for a reason. If you want the possibility of long lasting effects, it helps to prepare carefully. Are you a person of faith? Now’s the time to put your beliefs to the test. This will likely be one of the most difficult, challenging issues you’ve ever had to turn over to God. The time to begin is now.

Some people, with extraordinary willpower and social support, can detox and stay sober without professional assistance, but these people are rare and the vast majority of individuals addicted to heroin will need professional heroin treatment. For the purposes of this article, only professional treatment options are discussed. There are many self-help groups and programs available for heroin addiction as well.

There are five professional methods of heroin treatment. People addicted to heroin may elect to undergo:

- Medically Supervised Detoxification
- Rapid Detoxification
- Residential Rehab Program
- Medically Assisted Treatment
- Naltrexone / Vivitrol

The Five Methods of Heroin Treatment

Each of these methods for heroin treatment has pros and cons. Some treatments may work better for some than others and some of the treatments can be used in combination. For example, an addicted person may have a medically supervised detoxification followed by a residential rehab program.

Treatment for every addiction should be individualized to meet the needs of the addicted person.

Some addicted people have been able to hold on to jobs and keep their addiction secret. A person in this situation may not want to go to a residential rehab program because people might question where they are and their addiction would come to light.

Others may have been using heroin for twenty years or more and need more intensive treatment to learn how to live a life without substances.

The next section describes each treatment method in detail so you can decide which treatment would be best for your situation.

1. Medically Supervised Detoxification

Detoxification is simply the process by which the opiates leave your body and the body begins to return to normal working order without opiates.

Heroin Addiction Treatment continued

Detoxification generally takes from three days to a week depending on how much opiates the addicted person was using. Opiate withdrawal can be extremely painful and could possibly be dangerous if the addicted person has other health problems such as diabetes or heart problems.

Medical Supervision

Because of the dangers of opiate withdrawal, it is necessary for opiate withdrawal to be medically supervised. This means that any facility that will detox an addicted person from opiates must have medical staff on duty. Generally, a nursing staff will observe the addicted person and report to a doctor who is on call and checks on the patient daily.

Medications

Medications can be prescribed by the doctor to make the addicted person more comfortable while undergoing detoxification. Many facilities prescribe medications for nausea, diarrhea, sleep and other symptoms of withdrawal. Whether or not to prescribe medications and what medications are prescribed are at the discretion of the doctor so this will vary from facility to facility.

Staff at some facilities use Suboxone to ease withdrawal symptoms and then they wean the addicted person off Suboxone over a few days to a week. If you are considering detoxification, you can contact the facility you have chosen and ask them how they usually handle detoxification. They may not be able to give you clear-cut answers because treatment is individualized and you would have to be seen by the doctor but they might tell you if they use Suboxone or not.

While detoxification rids the body of opiates, it does not treat the underlying causes or the psychological aspect of addiction. For this reason, detoxification can be a first step before entering a residential rehab program.

2. Rapid Detoxification

Rapid detoxification is a process where the person addicted to heroin is placed under anesthesia while they are given medications to rid their body of opiates. Medications given may be naltrexone, which is an opiate blocker, or clonidine, which is a blood pressure medication. The process takes about one to two hours.

- The idea is that the body is completely rid of opiates while the addicted person is comfortably asleep throughout the process. This form of treatment can be more dangerous than a slower detoxification process.
- There is some controversy over the effectiveness of this treatment. While it does rid the body of opiates, this treatment on its own does not address the psychological aspects of addiction.

3. A Residential Rehab Program

Residential rehab treatment is inpatient treatment which generally lasts from 30 to 90 days; the addicted person stays at the treatment facility 24 hours a day.

Inpatient treatment facilities vary according to treatment philosophy and psychological techniques used to treat addiction.

Some inpatient facilities are based on the 12 Step model:

- These facilities encourage addicted people to attend 12 Step meetings and develop support systems to maintain sobriety. They may have people from Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) or Narcotics Anonymous (NA) come to the facility to talk to you about the program. And many facilities with this philosophy will take you to AA or NA meetings outside of the facility.

Other facilities take a mind, body and spirit approach with treatment techniques that address each of these areas.

- This means the facility would include treatments that address psychological, physical and spiritual needs. Psychological treatments may involve learning about triggers and cravings and developing ways to cope with these as well as building coping skills for life.
- Exercise could be a part of treating the physical part of addiction as well as medications for dual diagnosis addicts. Dual diagnosis means that the addicted person has mental health issues in addition to addiction.
- Spiritual treatments may involve encouragement to return to the church or religion the addicted person believes in, discovering spiritual beliefs or exploring how addiction changed their values and spiritual beliefs.

Some inpatient facilities specialize in treating dual diagnosis addicts and alcoholics:

- If you have a mental health diagnosis in addition to addiction, it is important to find a facility that will address both conditions. People who have co-occurring mental health problems cannot ignore the need for mental health treatment since mental health symptoms tend to affect the addiction.
- For example, someone with depression may relapse when they feel depressed or someone with an anxiety disorder may be more prone to using drugs when their anxiety is worse. To not treat the depression or anxiety would be like treating half of the problem.

Heroin Addiction Treatment continue

Regardless of philosophy:

- Most inpatient facilities offer both individual and group therapy
- Psycho-educational groups are also common at inpatient facilities. Psycho-educational groups are groups focused on a particular topic which the group facilitator will educate the group about and then allow the group time to discuss the topic. Some facilities even have classes to teach the addicted person about the disease concept, how drugs affect the brain and other educational topics.
- Some facilities offer free time to engage in recreational activities, read recovery literature or write in a journal.
- Other facilities offer classes in arts and crafts. Some even have pets that the addicted person can interact with because pets can offer great stress relief.
- You may be expected to do chores like cleaning your room and common areas.
- There may be areas and equipment available to engage in sports like volleyball or basketball.
- Some facilities take clients to recreational activities outside the facility. As you can see there are a variety of activities that could be a part of your treatment.

Each facility is different and each will have different activities. You can contact different treatment programs to find out what their program has to offer. Many facilities even have websites and Facebook pages so you can learn about the facility before you go.

4. Medication Assisted Treatment

Medication Assisted Treatment (MAT) is a form of heroin treatment which provides the addicted individual with opioids to replace the heroin or other opiates they may be taking. Opioids are synthetic or man-made medications. Opioids keep them from having withdrawal symptoms. There is some controversy over the use of MAT as some people believe it is just substituting one drug for another. However, MAT medications have significant advantages over heroin use for the addicted person.

- One advantage is that MAT medications are longer lasting. MAT medications have a half-life of 24 to 36 hours which means that only half of the medication leaves the body in 24 to 36 hours. The advantage of this is that the addicted person no longer needs to take drugs every 2 to 4 hours but can take a medication once a day. This helps them remove themselves from the lifestyle of addiction.

- Another advantage is that MAT is taken orally and is created so that an addicted person cannot abuse it intravenously. This keeps them from getting the euphoria associated with street drugs and also helps reduce incidents of disease such as HIV and hepatitis.

There are two types of MAT – Methadone and Suboxone

Methadone

Methadone is an opioid used to treat heroin addiction. Methadone is a full blocker which means that it completely blocks the effects of other opiates. This is to keep the addicted individual from using other opiates in addition to methadone. Methadone can be prescribed by a doctor for pain but it is generally prescribed and dispensed in methadone clinics. They must go to the clinic daily until they earn the privilege to have take-home bottles. The methadone wafer is dissolved in water and juice is usually added or it can be dispensed in liquid form. Methadone is dispensed by a nurse and must be swallowed in front of the nurse to be sure it is not diverted to sell on the street.

When an addicted person begins treatment with methadone, the doctor prescribes a low dose based on information gathered during the intake process. The dose is gradually increased until they are stabilized. Stabilization means the addicted person is on a dose that keeps them from having withdrawal but does not intoxicate them.

By itself, methadone only keeps the addicted individual from having withdrawal symptoms. However, methadone clinics are required to provide counseling to treat the psychological aspects of addiction. While in treatment, they can learn about the disease of addiction, relapse prevention techniques and develop new social connections with people who don't use drugs. They can also deal with many of the consequences of their addiction. For example, they can begin to face legal problems, health issues, repair family relationships and even go back to school.

Once an addicted person has stabilized on a dose, learned about addiction and repaired many of the problems in their life, they can gradually decrease their methadone dose until they are drug free. Some choose to remain on methadone and can be on it for the rest of their lives if they choose to do so.

Suboxone/Subutex

Suboxone is an opioid with a partial blocker. Suboxone contains Naloxone which is added to keep addicted people from abusing it intravenously. It also keeps them from being able to get the euphoric effects of opiates while on

Heroin Addiction Treatment continue

Suboxone. As long as they take their medication daily, they cannot get “high” by using opiates. This helps deter them from abusing their medication.

Subutex is the same as Suboxone but it does not contain Naloxone. It is meant for pregnant women and others who cannot take Naloxone for health reasons.

Those addicted to heroin that choose Suboxone treatment are generally given a dose between 8 mg and 16 mg. Much like methadone, the doctor prescribing the Suboxone will prescribe a dose sufficient to keep the addicted person from having withdrawal symptoms. Many Suboxone clinics provide counseling to treat the psychological aspects of addiction. Suboxone can also be prescribed by individual doctors who are certified to prescribe it.

To find a doctor or clinic that prescribes Suboxone or methadone, the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA) has a treatment locator on their website. SAMHSA is a government program that provides information on substance abuse and mental health issues.

5. Naltrexone / Vivitrol

Naltrexone is a drug marketed under the name Revia, Depade and in extended release, Vivitrol. Naltrexone is an opiate antagonist used to treat heroin addiction. The addicted person must be free of all opiates and not in withdrawal before this medication is given. It works by blocking the euphoric effects of opiates. The addicted person cannot get “high” while taking this medication. It can be given orally but the addicted person has to take the medication daily for it to be effective. If the addicted person stops taking the medication, they can use opiates after the drug is out of their system. This means that if they have cravings, they can simply stop taking the medication and go back to heroin use. It can also be given in the form of a monthly injection which means the addicted person cannot get “high” for at least a month after getting the injection. It is commonly prescribed after an addicted person has completed another treatment like Suboxone or a residential rehab program.

Any of these types of treatment can work if you can recognize that heroin brought more pain and horrible consequences to your life than fleeting moments of pleasure. However, the best treatment with the highest chance of success is the treatment that you put the most work into. Heroin addiction is never easy to overcome but it can be done when you work hard at your recovery.

Casey's Law

The Mathew "Casey" Wethington Act for Substance Abuse Intervention

Who is Casey?

Casey Wethington died at 23 years old from a heroin overdose. He suffered from a treatable disease that does NOT have to be fatal.

Casey was an energetic young man who enjoyed life until it was "taken" by drugs. As a boy, he participated in a variety of sports such as soccer, baseball, basketball, and wrestling. He enjoyed collecting baseball cards, playing video games, playing the guitar, riding bikes, and skateboarding. All of that changed when he "didn't know" what he liked "to do to have fun anymore" because he had started using drugs.

Casey's middle-class upbringing did not matter in the least when it came to the disease of addiction. Casey never intended to become addicted to drugs when he used the first time. What he did not realize was that his using would progress from abusing to dependence and then to the disease of addiction.

Casey's early drug use caused his development to be arrested at the age of 14 or 15. Regardless of that fact, and the fact that he suffered from an ultimately fatal disease, he was expected to respond as a normal, healthy young adult and choose treatment for himself. Parental intervention was discouraged and denied. Now it is too late for Casey but because of him, there is hope for others who suffer from addiction.

It is your responsibility to help change the stigma attached to addiction and be a part of the solution!

Why Casey's Law?

Casey's Law provides a means of intervening with someone who is unable to recognize his or her need for treatment due to their impairment. This law will allow parents, relatives, and/or friends to petition the court for treatment on behalf of the person who has a substance use disorder.

"Every effort to intervene on his disease was stymied because he was over the age of 18 and was not in the criminal justice system. I was told that "he has to want to, lose enough and hit bottom." That is contrary to the best practices for treatment of any other chronic progressive potentially fatal disease. With other diseases, we know that the sooner the disease is recognized, the longer it's treated, the better the chances for recovery."

The Steps to help and hope

- Schedule appointments for evaluations with 2 qualified health professionals, one of whom must be a physician.
- File petition (700A) - Petition is filed with the circuit court clerk in the county of the person with the substance use disorder (respondent) by the spouse, relative, friend or guardian (petitioner). The court reviews the petition, (if there is probable cause), orders that two evaluations be conducted and sets a court date within 14 days.
- Return evaluations at least 24 hours prior to the court date.
- Locate a detox and treatment facility immediately after the court date is set. The petitioner bears the responsibility and right to choose the facility.
- Treatment is ordered based on the evaluations and can be ordered from up to 60 and not more than 360 days, depending on the request of the petitioner and the results of the hearing.

Kentucky State Community Mental Health Centers

Community Mental Health (Regional) Centers provide a comprehensive range of accessible, coordinated, direct or indirect mental health services through Kentucky's 14 regional MH/IDD boards. Regional boards are private, nonprofit organizations serving residents of designated multicounty regions.

[chfs.ky.gov/dms/
Community+Mental+Health+Centers.htm](http://chfs.ky.gov/dms/Community+Mental+Health+Centers.htm)

Contact the Center in your region to determine if they provide the mental health, addiction, and support services you need and for an office location near you. Services may include mental health services, adolescent programs, inpatient care, outpatient, counseling, therapy, case management, family support services, assessments, and referrals.
